MASTER OF SCIENCE IN GLOBAL FINANCE

TO GET TO THE HEART OF GLOBAL FINANCE,
GO TO THE HEART OF GLOBAL FINANCE.

This is your chance to take your financial education beyond Italy.

Thanks to a partnership with Fordham University's Gabelli School of Business, SDA Bocconi University students are invited to apply to the Collaborative Master of Science in Global Finance program.

In this program, top students from all over the world—including you—begin their master's coursework at their home universities, then converge in summer 2017 to complete their studies in the premier city for global finance: New York City.

LEARN BEYOND THE CLASSROOM

Your Fordham classmates will come from four continents, offering viewpoints and regional knowledge that will add to what you are learning from the Gabelli School's world-renowned finance professors.

Fordham's innovative curriculum builds on what you are learning at SDA Bocconi. Focused on the opportunities and challenges facing multinational companies, it provides an in-depth look at global financial markets and the financing, risk, and capital-raising strategies that are shaping the world.

You will learn at the Gabelli School's midtown Manhattan campus, and—thanks to Fordham's extensive corporate connections—in the boardrooms and trading rooms of famous New York institutions: Bloomberg, Citigroup, and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York among them. In addition to these exciting company visits, the program includes trips that allow you to experience New York City's arts, culture, and history in the company of your classmates.

The Collaborative MS in Global Finance culminates in two master's degrees: one from SDA Bocconi and one from Fordham. You also come home with an unparalleled understanding of financial services and a new professional network that could include contacts on five continents.
